INTRODUCTION

In our time, in the public mind, a generalized image of a person who meets the requirements of the twenty-first century has already been identified. This is a physically healthy, educated, creative person, capable of purposeful social work, the builder of his own life, the sphere of habitation and communication, which, figuratively, is the basis of The moral foundations of an adult person are laid from childhood.

Modern education considers moral education in the system of comprehensive development of the personality of pupils. The moral upbringing of preschoolers is based on instilling in the child moral, aesthetic and spiritual values that form a positive, moral and developed personality. This allows children to form a worldview, citizenship, family values and moral guidelines.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

The feeling of the Motherland begins with admiration for what the baby sees in front of him, what he is amazed at and what causes a response in his soul. And, although many impressions are not yet deeply realized by them, but passed through children's perception, they play a huge role in the formation of the personality of a patriot. There is no doubt that in morally patriotic education, the example of adults, especially close people, is of great importance.

It is necessary to use all types of folklore - sayings, proverbs, fairy tales.

Understandable and valuable in the upbringing of children of all times are the proverbs about the Motherland, about the mother, about the native language, native nature. When selecting these proverbs, we take into account that they are, of course, understandable. One of our children's favorite proverbs: "There is no more beautiful than our Motherland in the world." Love for the Motherland and love for the mother are feelings inextricably linked. Proverbs about a mother woman are an effective means of cultivating love for the dearest person: "It is warm in the sun, good in the mother."

In fairy tales, children learn the struggle between good and evil. In them, children assert themselves, playing the actions of heroes. They develop internal ideas about honor, conscience, justice, which is an important component of socialization.

One of the important problems of modernity is the upbringing of a sense of duty to parents, the ability to show filial attention when it will be necessary in later years. It is formed by the whole previous life. A sense of duty grows from the depths of childhood, thanks to the purposeful upbringing of a child, and manifests itself in a respectful attitude towards loved ones.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Of great importance is a personal example [3]. Parents should understand that children absorb and copy your behavior, not your words. They only listen to the words and often pass by the ears. But if you bring your words to life, then this is a great example. If children see that adults are deceiving, then they will also begin to tell lies, invent and lie. If you use rude words in your speech, then the little child will think that this is right and next time he can behave rudely and vulgarly. But if the parents behave calmly and morally, then the child will copy their behavior.

Caress and attention are the main sources that nourish and support children's joy. Caring for a child helps to develop the optimistic character of such personality traits that are manifested in a reciprocal kind attitude towards people, self-confidence. A joyful atmosphere encourages the child to be active. He wants to help his mother in her household chores and, of course, he will be even more willing to participate in these matters, if they are of interest to him, and will give positive results.

Animals evoke special joy in children, Matvey recalls that the greatest joy is a polar bear, which he saw in the zoo, remembers, animatedly shows some bear, a big one. "And I was very happy when I saw little kittens with our cat," Anya admires. And small animals cause special joy in children. Watching their growth, playing with them is a great pleasure for children. You can take care of them, feed them, protect them. This patronage elevates the child in his own eyes, he is strong, big, the well-being of helpless animals depends on him.

Children often find the first feelings of beauty in nature, Lizochka recalls: "I really liked to rest in Fergana. I was glad when I came to the sea, there are a lot of shells, beautiful pebbles, and what ships! Yaroslav said that he found a porcini mushroom, and it was so beautiful that it was even a pity to pick it.

It is also very important to use concrete examples of the honest and moral behavior of the children themselves for the education of truthfulness.

CONCLUSION

The motto in the life of every person should be the words: "Do good on the whole planet and let the children get it in full!".

Children are the seeds of life. Seeds will give positive sprouts, there will be bread on the table, there will be no wars, gardens will bloom, there will be beauty. Life will go on!
