Annotation: This article deals with all modern fine arts. And this article, among other things, makes everyone feel all of modern art without traveling with these images, a huge gap in the human mind, looking for numerous questions about life, including how everyone lives. Modern visual arts allow artists to express themselves in a wide variety of forms; in the use of everyday fine art material to communicate with people, leaves museums to the memory of the population, and including it makes everyone think and makes people think about fine art and about the life of each person.

Keywords: Visual arts, modernity, life, society, world, education.

In each study of modernity, the fine arts give us different views of the world, reach new and unusual feelings of objects and objects. This article depicts the importance of modern fine art in the life of every person, including precisely through fine art, in which we often have to feel a thing before we can view and recover everything we have around us and can think, know and including feel, all through contemporary fine art.

In real modern fine art, they allow us to see everything in the world in different ways, with different views, the reasons in which we picked up the prophetic, and in which it exists around us, and in that opinions mean concepts and knowledge, including thinking and rethinking what everyone sees, so that everything is done in a critical reading of a world in which everything is a part, where everyone can leave a mark for everyone to contribute to the story. And when we see more, we learn more, and from this we expand all our possibilities by contacts with our own reality, including in order to understand everything, which are partly a person's personality, so the search for art is critical thinking in relation to the whole world which surround us all as art and human life.

Art in our time.

First of all, we all think about modern fine art as if we don't know anything, we confuse everything, we mix one with the other modern art, at that time new possibilities of irresistible forces appear, penetrate the mind, and, among other things, give people the opportunity to think and think through fine art about his life, makes contemporary art sound like a song to all ears and eyes, including our souls and intrusion into our existence, human thought. At one time, modern fine art begins to travel all over the arts to feel all the different colors, shapes, events in which the social context of those times that enters this time is reflected.

Modern fine art artists, throughout all history, through all their art time to ponder, ask for new forms of representations of the current problem, it is well diversified and broad in aspects; In turn characterizes the strategic connection with the political and social transformation of these times.

Thus, art is preferred as the main activity for every person, so when a person produces something, he interacts with the surrounding nature, in which he lives and develops. This path helps each person to move forward to develop, strives for something that can change anything with this, and also has the function of stimulating human thoughts, thinking that art is also a part of a person's life and his thoughts about the world, which is a critic of the soul. Through each fine art, people create and recreate ever new meanings of all existence, with images of gifts from all their own paths to collaboration with stories. A history in which everyone is present, left in this way and marked in this time of our modernity.

Contemporary Art and Society.

In the area of art is becoming broader and without boundaries, because of this change means a significant reform set by the standard, including includes the consciousness of the viewer. Art are independent means of communication, space transitions. All the city is involved in art, not in the number of galleries, but organic with it, in the impossible completion of work with the art system. The main motivation of contemporary arts are the creation of dialogues with folk in culture, which means represents what was happening in the public upsurge in a given moment of time and including how it works.

In contemporary art, art is defined by rebellion, the desire to be surprised, the desire for the original of everything valuable. Artistic manifestations are due to human needs including sorting and understanding of their experience and vision of the world, and every human existence, from every culture, age, gender and social level has the opportunity to create, produce and admire the arts of the world.

Everyone understands that the arts go in stories, which always accompany us with the reporting of facts every season. When in history everyone was told about the judgment, then art is reflected that the same, years after, the exploitation of the earth and in the works, the final art, the image mentioned the arts and life to go instead of part of the stories, which at that time is a division of art.

At this time, the fine arts go beyond the frame, with this we can say that those times people went beyond the ordinary, normal, except for the decline, but with this at the present time, we can say that people are showing images of modern art in society. And this in its own way begins to be neat in its own way. But with this, I want to say that contemporary fine art is important for every person for development, for consumption purposes, for knowledge and of course for further knowledge.
